

Mike Ramsdell was born and raised in Bear River, Utah. Upon graduation from Utah State University, he was commissioned an officer in the Military Intelligence Corps. After post graduate studies at the University of Utah, he began his military active duty as a graduate from the Defense Language Institute (Russian and German) in Washington, DC. Mike's career specialty in Russian/Soviet counterintelligence has taken him on missions throughout Europe, Russia, Scandinavia, and to Asia. Lt. Colonel Ramsdell has served with US and NATO militaries, various US intelligence agencies, and the US Department of State. He had the opportunity to work in support of the first Reagan-Gorbachev Moscow Summit. Mike currently lives in northern Utah with his wife, Bonnie, and their two cats. Active in racquetball, tennis, and skiing, he also serves in the Sunday school of his local church. His national best seller "A Train to Potevka" is Mike's first book.
